

Community Planner Fort St. John and/or Dawson Creek, BC

About the Opportunity

Our growing northeastern BC consulting practice is looking to add passionate and talented individuals with an interest in community planning to join our team of professionals working directly with urban, rural and Indigenous communities, leadership, citizens and stakeholders.

The Urban Systems planning team provides professional planning services to our many clients who are dealing with the interconnections between governance, policy, finance, urban design, land use, mobility, infrastructure and the social determinants of community health. More and more of our clients are seeking innovative ideas and customized solutions based on an integrated perspective of these fields.

In this role, you will benefit from the support and mentorship of industry professionals both locally and across our company. We are excited to work with someone who is capable and collaborative, and who will proactively support our local team with purpose, enthusiasm, and a desire to help build vibrant communities.

As a member of our planning practice, you can expect to be involved in:

- Working on a broad range of planning projects including policy and bylaw development, growth and development studies, community planning and design, strategic planning, and social planning
- Statistical analysis, and technical analysis
- Interpreting legislation, regulations, and policies
- Collaborating with our teams to develop and implement engagement and communications strategies and materials
- Researching and preparing planning documents, proposals, surveys, grant applications, reports, and presentations
- Attending meetings and liaising with clients, citizens, and stakeholders

About You

Our preferred candidates will have:

- a completed graduate degree in geography, liberal arts, planning, or other related degree OR
- a completed undergraduate degree or master's degree in planning (or a related field) and work experience in the private and/or public sector

Registration, or eligibility for registration as a professional planner with PIBC is an asset. In addition, the following qualities would be considered a benefit to this role:

- A service mindset with a passion for serving urban, rural, and Indigenous communities in northern BC
- A self-starter who is opportunity-seeking and who thrives in a self-directed work environment
- An ability to develop and nurture positive relationships with people from varied backgrounds, including team members, clients, and industry partners
- Excellent communication skills with proficiency in writing, verbal, and visual communications, and delivering presentations and facilitating workshops and meetings, both in person and virtually
- A willingness and desire to work with interdisciplinary teams for a variety of clients
- Strong organizational capabilities, demonstrating project management skills and the ability to work simultaneously on multiple projects with competing deadlines
- An aptitude for research and the ability to translate information efficiently and quickly into materials for various audiences

As this position requires travel, a valid Class 5 Drivers License is required.

About Northeastern BC (Fort St. John and Dawson Creek)

Northeastern BC has a young, energetic and growing population. This is an opportunity to live and play in the north while joining a tight-knit team of professionals working on unique assignments creating resilient and vibrant communities.

Our Fort St. John office, established for over 25 years, has a team of 23 people who support local government and Indigenous communities across the Peace region. We are a welcoming, inclusive, and community-oriented group of people that frequently come together to participate and help out in the community at a variety of events. We recently opened a new office in Dawson Creek in late 2020. If the idea of being a part of building a new team is intriguing to you, then Dawson Creek may be a great place for you.

At this time, we are looking for enthusiastic teammates to join us and make either Fort St. John or Dawson Creek home.
